The only wonder is that more serious harm did not ensue, as there were many spirited horses attached to the carriages in the procession.

A complaint was made against the man by his wife before the Police authorities two weeks ago of having assaulted her and threatened to take her life. A warrant was issued for his arrest, but before it was served be again assaulted his wife, this time with a revolver, and but for the timely interference of some of the neighbors she probably would have been killed. He discharged one barrel of the revolver at her, but failed in his attempt. He was arrested and brought before the Police Magnistrate. who stated that the case attempt. He was arrested and brought before the Police Magistrate, who stated that the case appeared of such an aggravated nature that he would commit the man for Jury trial. He was duly indicted, and when called for trial pleaded guilty. But to the surprise of all present, the presaling Justice imposed a sentence of ten dollars fine and three days imprisonment. We can but believe that the Justice did not fully understand the case, for the sentence was surely insdequate to the offense. Mr. Preston conducted the presecution, and Mr. Davidson appeared for the prisoner.

Three men attempted to enter and rob the bouse of our old and esteemed citizen, John Boardman. The window was smashed in with an are, at the head of his bed, hurled with the apparent attempt to brain him, sleeping. He was aroused, screamed for help, seized his pistol and fired. The native man sleeping in a house near by, was awakened, but was hindered from coming out by repeated pistol shots against his door, fired by the borglars. Between the vigorous call for help and the use of pistols by Mr. Boardman and the native man, the borglars were driven off, leaving marks of blood, showing that they had been wounded. They left behind them a sledge hammer, an axe, a steel pointed jimmy, and a club. Their evident intention was to nourder Mr. Boardman and rob his safe, which contained a considerable amount of money, the proceeds of a bankrupt sale recently held, of which Mr. Boardman was the receiver. This daring attempt has created wide spread alarm, and every effort is being made to discover the culprits, who are evidently practiced bands at the helarious business. Taxation.

Frayen Gaverry -- We have read with some thought Mr. S. N. Castle's able plea in his attempts to convince your renders and the Governerty and abould pay all the taxes to support the Government; in other words, money invested in the industries (B's positition) should pay all the taxes, and money loaned, (A's position), nothing. We presume in the illustration used by Mr. Castle, that A. represents the creditor or non-producing class, and B, the cebtor or producing class. We will so consider them, and wish to say a word in B's defence and will do so by telling Mr. Castle's story over, and tell the schole story. Suppose A. leans B. $100,000 on hand and martrage, drowing 20 per cent. per annum interest, inerest payable half yearly; B. establishes a plantation with the money, by this simple transaction A. has established a net yearly income of $10,000, while B. has no certain net income, and it is quite problematical whether he will have any for some years to come over and above the $15,000 interest he pays yearly to A. The Assessor makes his appearance and politely make B. about his property. B. answers houselly, "I purchased this operty upon my own judgment seven months to for $100,000, which I borrowed of A., I think ago for $100,000, which I borrowed of A., I think the property worth what I paid for it, I have al-ready paid the first six months interest."

The Assessor puts B. down upon the books for $100,000, taxable property, plantation and ap-partenances. The Assessor calls upon A. for a statement of his wealth, A. answers honestly, "I have $100,000 loaned to B. on mortgage, for which I receive $5,000 interest every six months. B. has paid the first six months interest and having no use for the money I have loaned it to B. and took se for the money I have loaned it to B. and took is personal note for $5,000, densing I per cent. per sounds interest, interest pageble quarterly."

The officer taxes A. $105,000, cash loaned congrainfating A. at the same time by remarking upon his happy situation and his increasing princely

Yes, says A. "If I can compound my income every six months in twenty years, I shall be a richer man than Sam Brannan."
"I don't do snything but look after my money, I eve no plantations, houses nor merchandise, and Mr. Castle, my attorney, says it is wrong to tax me, but if the law says I must pay taxes, all right,

We have given A. credit for a willingnes to pay taxes which may be questioned, but aside from that, can anyone look upon the story as now told and say that either A. or B. is wrongly taxed, or unequally taxed or over-taxed or doubly taxed. Each controlls about the same amount of property and enjoys its income without let or hindrence, and each have been once taxed. We deay that both have been taxed for the same property.

The Assessor's book say that A. a property con-both have been taxed for the same property.

The Assessor's book say that A.'s property consists of "$105,000 cash loaned," and B.'s property consists of a "plantation and appurtenances" which makes them two distinct properties.

The laws of the Kingdom protect the person and property of each, and establish Recording effices for the safe keeping of titles etc., and place Courts, Sheriffs and other officers to defend nem and their property; and it is right both should corn part of the expense.

beer a part of the expense.

But A simply having a "claim" says Mr. Castle it should not be taxed, but B. "should pay" all the taxes; why, the very word "claim" in this case indicates ownership of property. A. "claims" $105,000 in money and enjoys its innoune, no one disputes his right if he claims the money, none disputes his right if he claims the money, none disputing he owns it, or else he is a rogue, claiming what does not belong to him. B. "claims" a claiming what does not belong to him. B. "claims" a claiming what does not belong to him. ing what does not belong to him. B. Caulis a plantation and appartenances, he owns and en-joys it and the income from it. The "claim" of each is based upon the principle of ownership, and if one is taxed for what he "claims" both should be. There are two claims, two properties, two incomes, and two meners taxed for their property. That is expected.

That is right.

To make B pay all the taxes would be double taxotion—unequal taxotion, unjust taxotion, a wrong and an outrage against the rights of man.

We accord to Mr. Castle the same honesty of purpose in his plea as we claim for ours. There ther item or so in Mr. Castle's communica-

The action of the heart is regular, and the pulse, from 75 to 80, is uniform. Only when Polua becomes somewhat mentally excited the rate of pulsations increase, which under such circumstances is quite common, as I have trequently experienced the same thing even in the colonial forces. A severe battle has been received to-day from Busutoland reporting resupntion of hostilities between the Basutos and such circumstances is quite common, as I have such circumstances is quite common, as I have frequently experienced the same thing even in the ordinary examination of healthy and robust men for life insorance, etc. It would not be surprising to me if the so often repeated examinations in various ways and by different persons, which Polus various ways and by dimerent persons, which reliable and outbredly considers vitally important in repart of to his future fate, combined with solitary confinement (the least endurable punishment to Hawaiians, according to my observation), should produce a change in the circulation of blood, as I League in England, and is organizing branches cannot help observing that he is, most probably for the above reasons, not so strong a man as he was when I first saw him.

E. Hoffmann, M. D.,
DEAR SIR: At your request I have made a close and careful examination of the chest and heart of Polus at the prison.

I do not find him suffering from heart dise I do not find him suffering from heart disease of any kind, as stated by a party in one of the papers of last week.

There are no abnormal sounds, and the heart's action is smooth and regular, the pulse ranging from 72 to 75, according to the different positions that he was placed in when being examined. I have no doubt but that any powerful mental emotion, such as the long continued arriving in his case, would produce an intermittance of the pulse occasionally, and that this fact would to a casual observer or to a party who wished to make a little capital for buckene, give them a basis to work upon.

I will say in conclusion that whatever heart symptoms he may have had, they were merely functional and not depending upon either inflamations of an acute or chronic character or structural lesions. Respectfully Jno. S. McGraw."

"Br. Hoffmann—Brax Sm: By your request of a few days ago, I visited Polus in prison yesterday and made a thorough examination of his heart. I failed to detect anything abnormal about it. The pulse-rate was amply within the normal limit, and the changes of posture which I subjected him to, together with my examination of him, failed to recite it to an abnormal degree, Both sounds were clear and perfectly natural. The area of duliness and position of the apex beat were both normal. "Very truly, J. Baoorz."
